

Nice Community outreach!

Cricket Wireless in Newark is helping about 80 local children get ready to go back to school by providing them with attractive green, gray and black backpacks.

Store manager and '94 Newark High School graduate Corey Brey _ whose dad Rocky Brey taught sixth grade science at Newark Middle School from 1969 until 1999 _ said the Cricket Wireless cellphone stores <https://www.cricketwireless.com/> in Central and Western New York, owned by Greenfield Wireless, are providing backpacks to some elementary school children in need before school opens.

Working in conjunction with the Newark Blessings In A Backpack organization and Greg Herbst, Assistant Principal of Perkins and Lincoln Schools, Brey got the word out to families of Pre-K through second grade students in need that backpacks were being distributed at the store, located in the Newark Wegmans Plaza, August 22nd, 29th and beyond until they run out of them.

Brey, whose wife, Sue Brey, stepson Ryan Hall and son Tristyn Brey are NHS graduates, and whose daughter Felicity will be in 7th grade at NMS next month, said his store is happy to help make back to school preparation a little bit easier for families in need.
