

Read Across America Week
Held At Kelley School

We Read Tons Of Books

Read Across America Week, held at Kelley School February 27th through March 3, helped students in the grades 3-5 school celebrate reading in academically-based and fun ways.

All students were challenged to read for 20 minutes each night and track their reading with the entire school's week-long goal to have students read for a total of 40,000 minutes.

Since the goal was surpassed, Kelley teachers will celebrate the students' achievement by lip syncing a song at a school assembly later this month.

Each day of the recent reading week celebration focused on a different theme and, depending on the day, students dressed in wacky clothes, wore their favorite hats, wacky socks, dressed like a twin or wore flannel and comfy clothes.

Classroom doors were also decorated to celebrate Dr. Seuss and classrooms had mystery readers from the school district read to them.

Each classroom also had 20 minutes of quality, drop everything and read time each day.

"It was exciting to see staff and students celebrating our love of reading," said fifth grade teacher Lisa Zalacca, who helped plan the week with AIS reading teacher Christine Seymour and other faculty.
